WORKSHOP: Mama Said Knock You Out

Paul Fleming VP, Fuel, Combustion Creativity / Researcher,
Henley School of Business, University of Reading

Research shows us that the right types of conflict are key to being more creative and producing better ideas. However, not everyone is comfortable with conflict, and it's our job to encourage it when it's appropriate. Borrowing analogies from the world of boxing, this workshop will help you to understand the types of conflict, your personal conflict styles, and give you some simple rules to successfully build conflict confidence in the ring. In this experiential workshop we break down the essential components of positive conflict into easily accessible and fun techniques, transforming you into a creative conflict master.

OBJECTIVES: Learn how certain types of conflict can accelerate your team's creative output; understand how tools and techniques can be applied to generating healthy conflict; and discover your own and others' personal conflict style and when to try to borrow another approach.

How to Thrive in an Expression Economy

Low production costs, easy distribution, and suddenly, everyone's a creator. Consumers can now fill their day with content dedicated to their hobbies, passions, and the things that interest them most. For business, that's a problem. Consumers used to vote with their wallets. Now, they vote with their time. And you know who's winning the battle for time? Other consumers. Right now, your customers are more creative than you are. They're more innovative than you are. They're more authentic than you are. Often, they're even more helpful than you are. Ron Tite's humorous and insightful talk helps people learn how to win other people's time. Highlighting operational and personal innovation, authenticity, creativity and more, Ron teaches individuals how to act like customers by being more interesting and thus, win more of their customer's time.

OBJECTIVES: In the battle for time, your competition isn't the category leader – it's the consumers. It doesn't matter if you're selling a product, pitching a new idea, or trying to get a raise, your biggest challenge is getting a customer to willingly give you the time to do it.

CONCURRENT SESSIONS

Thursday, May 4 | 10:45 am - 12:00 pm

1A A Talent Management and Succession Planning Guide for Disruptive Leadership

Sheila Simpson Consultant, Sheila Simpson & Associates
Chris Moss Consultant, Moss Leadership Consulting

Now, more than ever, our traditional problem solving and strategic planning processes are no longer working, and may truly be hurting our organizations. Today's leaders must be bold and face change head on with creativity, transparency and engagement. There are new skills we must learn to become more agile, flexible and innovative or our organizations are going to come to an end.

OBJECTIVES: This session combines new leadership skills, collaboration strategies, mindset shifts and design thinking. This workshop is not only for people in a leadership role, but also for those who aspire to shake things up and improve the impact that their organization is having in their community. We will work with the participants in a dynamic, engaging session that will bring leaders outside of their comfort zones where they will consider new ways of leading that just may fly in the face of what they are used to. We will provide time to learn and time to talk together about our new realities and co-create a better future for us all.

1B Real Costs for Real Outcomes

Dan Kershaw Executive Director, Furniture Bank

What the world needs now are Non Profits with HIGH IMPACT, not low overhead. Come listen to a different way to see the Overhead Issue. Furniture Bank is a living example that debunks the myth that charities should be penalized by how much they spend on "overhead". Take the first steps to developing your own "Overhead Manifesto" for your stakeholders.

OBJECTIVES: Our sector has the power to reframe the narrative around operating and administrative costs. Increasingly, funders are recognizing that these infrastructure costs are critical for nonprofits to operate sustainably and are changing their approach to allow for flexibility. Let's build on this momentum. Contribute to the dialogue by engaging in some myth-busting around administration costs and discussing alternatives to "low overhead."

1C Boost Your I+Q (Innovation & Quality) Using Creating Problem Solving Tools

Janeen Halliwell Director, People Minded Business
Jennifer Keilty-Friesen Director, People Minded Business

Thriving in today's world demands new thinking, creative ideas, and innovative solutions. In this highly experiential workshop, participants will be introduced to a variety of creative problem solving tools and techniques that are used by both private and public sectors worldwide to generate innovative solutions to today's challenges. If you are curious about innovation and how successful organizations and companies come up with new and novel ideas, this session is for you.

OBJECTIVES: Participants will become familiar with creative problem solving processes that spark new ideas; participants will be introduced to the People Minded Business proprietary I+Q system, and see how today's innovation is tomorrow's quality; and participants will leave the session with practical concepts, tools and techniques that they can start at their organizations tomorrow.

1D The Importance of Wellness

Yona Lunsky Clinician Scientist, Centre for Addiction and Mental Health

Promoting health and wellness is not the same thing as preventing illness. How do we promote wellness in the people we serve, their families, and ourselves?

OBJECTIVES: Creative examples of ways we can work differently in our agencies to include caregiver wellness as an explicit focus of the work that we do.

1E Legal Topics Impacting Non-Profits

Chuck Hofley Partner, Hicks Morley Hamilton Stewart Storie LLP

This presentation will cover emerging topics in labour and employment law that will mean the difference between surviving to thriving for organizations responding to such issues.

OBJECTIVES: The audience will learn about emerging topics such as accommodating an aging workforce, scent sensitivities, violence in the workplace by those we support, medical marijuana, and gender identity and gender expression.

Thursday, May 4 | 10:45 am - 12:00 pm

1F Living Well in Community: Continuing the Conversation about Housing and Support Services

Karen Chan Assistant Deputy Minister, Ministry of Community and Social Services

Building on the momentum of the Minister's Housing Forum held in November 2016, this session will provide an update on some of the key themes and explore opportunities for potential next steps as we move towards a more inclusive, person-centred approach to housing and support services for adults with a developmental disability. This session will focus on the specific ways that MCSS and its community and inter-ministerial partners are working to build collaborative relationships across sectors to provide innovative housing and support services for adults with a developmental disability.

OBJECTIVES:

- Provide a brief overview of the many different MCSS housing initiatives for adults with a developmental disability and how they are inter-connected.
- Describe some creative community-driven housing initiatives that help adults with a developmental disability to live successfully in the community.
- Discuss the importance of taking a person-centred focus when developing innovative housing approaches and the importance of strong community connections.
- Consider the ways that agencies and other partners can help adults with a developmental disability to access a range of housing and support options and leverage a variety of resources to meet their housing and support needs.
- Identify some promising practices (e.g. of collaboration across sectors, partnerships between different agencies and innovative housing models from the Housing Task Force).
- Outline some key themes that came out of the Minister's Housing Forum and ask for feedback on the "what we heard" document.

CONCURRENT SESSIONS

Thursday, May 4 | 3:30 pm – 4:45 pm

2A Simple, Nimble, Quick

Paul Fleming VP, Fuel, Combustion Creativity / Researcher, Henley School of Business, University of Reading

It's a world full of scary buzzwords out there. "Disruptive innovation" leading to "transformational change" resulting in "agile organizations" (or alternatively stomach upset and stress). Many leaders feel confused and left behind knowing the majority of services will continue to be delivered by well-established organizations with the experience, people and resources on their side BUT in an environment where the rules are anything but certain. This sometimes provocative, no nonsense session challenges you to think differently about the change you need to be, uncovering the simple things that start-ups do to stay nimble and quick in a constantly changing world.

OBJECTIVES: Learn why the whole world, and not just community and social services, have got to get nimble and quick; understand the core elements of a nimble organization from what we know from new ventures; and discover simple ways to begin creating more nimble organizations.

2B Community Engagement in Organizational Strategic Planning

Martyn Beckett Assistant Deputy Minister, Ontario Ministry of Education

Organizational strategic planning both defines our priorities internally and speaks to our community externally. Effective planning integrates the hopes, desires, and dreams of the community so that the finished plan is relevant to the full community. Shared leadership and engagement of all voices results in a better plan where all parties can see themselves reflected.

OBJECTIVES: This interactive session explores the process undertaken in a large Ontario school district which developed a new process for gathering community voice to support the design of a new strategic plan. Additionally, the district leadership reconsidered the entire mission, vision, and values to develop a mantra statement which can be reflected in all district actions and can be remembered by all. Participants will be engaged by using an electronic tool to gather information "on the fly" during the session and will be able to use the tool at no cost in their home context. The process used and the finished product will be shared.

Thursday, May 4 | 3:30 pm – 4:45 pm

2C Sparking Social Innovation within Our Organization

Andre Vashist Director of Social Finance & Social Enterprise, Pillar Nonprofit Network

Pillar Nonprofit supports non-profit member organizations in fulfilling their missions in our community, while also making connections for community impact. Pillar believes fostering social enterprise, social innovation and social finance cross-sector collaboration are key strategic priorities in building stronger and more inclusive communities.

OBJECTIVES: Learn about how social innovations taking place in the for-profit, non-profit and public sectors can collide to spark new ways of thinking that solve existing challenges. Gain knowledge about how to achieve social or environmental outcomes and maximize revenue through social enterprise. Hear how mobilizing private capital through investments in social enterprises, charities and other impact-focused organizations that deliver a social dividend and an economic return to achieve social and environmental goals. Also learn about designing and facilitating a rigorous process that takes a diverse group of people on a journey to understand, co-create, and prototype solutions together. Then, we take solutions that work and help them scale to affect greater change.

2D Managing the Operations & Legal Considerations of Individualized Funding Models

Brendon Pooran Founder and Principal Lawyer, Pooran Law

Xavier Noordermeer Executive Director, Community Living Windsor

This session will explore the development and implementation of legal frameworks for agencies delivering individualized and direct funding models. Brendon and Xavier will provide an overview of the various individualized funding offerings currently being delivered by agencies. These service delivery models include: Fee for service arrangements (using Passport, Individualized and Direct Funding resources), Passport administration services and Brokerage services.

OBJECTIVES: By sharing CLW's experience, participants will hear about the effectiveness of some of these models and their Purchase of Service procedures for Individualized and Direct funding. An overview of the legal issues and risk management considerations that go into operationalizing the various models will be provided, including:

- Contracting with individuals, families and self-directed support organizations (i.e. microboards, arohas)
- Impact of QAM and the Social Inclusion Act
- Potential conflicts of interest
- Managing organizational risk
- Labour and employment implications
- Families' influence on staffing
- Informing families of staffing options (employees versus independent contractors)
- Implications on unionized workforces
- Consent, capacity and legal-decision making matters

2E Integrative Thinking

Nogah Kornberg-Rotman Associate Director, I-Think Initiative

Integrative Thinking can help leaders find creative solutions to the problems they face every day. Integrative Thinking, at its core, is about working to create a new idea when faced with competing or clashing alternatives. Rather than simply choosing between opposing models, integrative thinkers seek to leverage the tension of opposing ideas into new and better possibilities. Using Integrative Thinking as a guiding theory, this session is designed to help leaders make better decisions more of the time.

OBJECTIVES: An introduction to Integrative Thinking as a guiding theory that offer leaders an experience with a new process for creative problem solving.

We are creating a "RECHARGE ZONE" just for you!

What is a Recharge Zone? – It is a quiet, common space where you can:

- sit quietly to contemplate what you're learning
- pull up a yoga mat and do a few guided stretches
- learn some mindfulness and meditation techniques
- grab a refreshing flavoured water
